

Associação Médica Brasileira (AMB, Brazilian Medical Association)

Brazil

The AMB plays an active role in technical committees, councils, and national forums, collaborating with government agencies, universities, and research institutions in the formulation of public policies, clinical guidelines, and parameters for quality of care, ensuring the presence of scientific medicine in strategic health decisions in Brazil. It periodically publishes a series of original publications, including guidelines, developed to support medical practice and give visibility to its main initiatives among its members, federated entities, and specialty societies. Since 2000, the Guidelines Project has collaborated with Specialty Societies to develop recommendations based on the best available scientific evidence.
