

Australian Psychological Society (APS)

Australia

APS is working to improve the lives of Australians through psychology, working in diverse settings and sectors around the country. It helps the community to understand and access psychology via education, advocacy, and evidence-based practice.

APS Position Statements outline key recommendations based on psychological evidence about contemporary social issues, such as climate change, racism and gambling.

<https://psychology.org.au/>

Link to recommendations: <https://psychology.org.au/for-the-public/psychology-topics/evidence-based-psychological-interventions>

Table

Recommended treatments by APS according to their empirical support

Strong	Acceptance and commitment therapy, Cognitive-behavioural therapy, Dialectical behaviour therapy, Emotion-focused therapy, Eye movement desensitisation and reprocessing, Family-based interventions, Interpersonal psychotherapy, Mindfulness-based cognitive therapy, Problem-solving therapy, Psychoeducation, Schema therapy, Self-guided digital interventions, Short-term psychodynamic therapy, Solution-focused therapy
Moderated	-
Weak/Controversial	-
Insufficient	-
No evidence	-
assessment	-
First line	-