

Society for Clinical Psychology (SCP)

United States of America

A division of the American Psychological Association that promotes the integration of psychological science throughout all areas of practice, including clinical service provision, research, education, and advocacy. It offers a list of psychological treatments supported by published efficacy data, based on their criteria (Chambless & Hollon, 1998; Tolin, 2015). It is designed to guide treatment decisions by integrating research evidence with clinician expertise and patient preferences and is intended for a broad audience including the public, clinicians, educators, researchers, and students.

<https://societyofclinicalpsychology.org/>

Link to recommendations: <https://societyofclinicalpsychology.org/resource/psychological-treatments-archive/filter-depression/>

Table

Treatments recommended by SCP according to their empirical support

Strong	Behavioural activation, Cognitive behavioural analysis system of psychotherapy, Cognitive therapy, Interpersonal psychotherapy, Mindfulness-based cognitive therapy, Problem-solving therapy, Self-management/Self-control therapy
Moderate	Acceptance and commitment therapy, Emotion-focused therapy, Mom Power, Rational emotive behavioural therapy, Radically open dialectical behavioural therapy, Reminiscence/Life review therapy, Self-system therapy, Short-term psychodynamic therapy
Weak/Controversial	-
Insufficient	-
No evidence assessment	-
First line	-